

Burma:

A Nonviolent Approach

This spring, Htoo Paw, A Selkirk College Peace Studies student, will travel back to the Thai-Burmese border to introduce nonviolent conflict transformation to her colleagues struggling for justice. She will look at how transformative justice can be used to move forward the peace process, how ex-combatants will benefit, how victims will get a certain degree of justice and finally how communities can be rebuild for the long term. Come and hear about her proposal.

Thursday, April 10, 7:00 pm

Mir Centre for Peace, Castlegar campus

Admission by donation. Refreshments will be served.

selkirk.ca/mir | 250.365.1234
Shaping our futures through conversations that matter.